That’s ____15____ doctors always suggest people get						There are about 110 disabled dancers whose average age is 20 in the China Disabled People’s Performing Art Troupe. They perform dances that are instructed by Zhang Jigang, one of Chinese best choreographers. Their most famous dance is “Thousand-Hand Guan Yin.” They have done the dance in over 40 countries and even performed in the 2004 Olympic Games in Greece.

At first, Zhang felt sorry for the dancers because they could not hear anything. However, after he had worked with them for some time, he found they had a lot of creativity and very strong determination. He once said, “Even though the dancers have a hearing disability, I do not want to see them dance just for the form, without soul. I want them to show, through their dance, the best of Chinese culture.”

Unable to hear any music, the dancers often have helpers near the stage who use the sign language to tell them when to do the next part. This keeps them in time to the music, and the audience cannot tell they are deaf.

The dance troupe always works very hard to be excellent in their performance. Above all, it shows people that they can do anything if they are willing to spend a lot of time practicing.

In real life, those successful people often share at least one important thing in common. That is, they had to make a tough decision at some point in their lives. One film which talks about the topic is the heart-warming tale of Billy Elliot. It tells the story of a boy who must choose between boxing, the life his father wants for him, and ballet.

Billy came from a poor family, and his father was forced to work long hours as a miner. Billy’s father always dreamed his son would become the most well- known boxer one day and help the family to escape poverty. When Billy was eleven years old, his father signed him up for boxing lessons. However, Billy once discovered a ballet class in the gym and showed great interest in it. Soon, he started spending a lot of time dancing instead of boxing. When Billy’s father and brother found out about this, they became very upset with him. They felt ballet was for women, and Billy should focus on boxing instead. However, Billy never gave in. He continued to practice dancing whenever he could. At last, his father understood that he was more talented as a dancer and supported him in realizing his dream.

The film ends with Billy taking part in a famous ballet troupe. As a result, the film encourages people to make their dreams come true with strong determination and hard work.
