Does your family or friend need a guide dog?

Our guide dog will be his or her best partner! Our guide dogs can:

- Guide him or her across the road.
- Lead him or her to elevator buttons.
- Help him or her board a bus or get into a taxi.
- Walk with him or her along the sidewalk.
- Judge the width and height of a space (so he or she won't bump* his or her head).
- Turn right, turn left, or go straight on his or her command*.
- Stay quietly beside him or her when he or she is sitting down.

If you want to know more about us, please call 04-7654321 for more information.

For a long time, Jake wanted a dog. However, his father did not like dogs. “You have to take them for walks and they bark too much,” his father said. One cold December day, though, Jake saw a dog near a restaurant. The restaurant owner said she sometimes fed the dog because it looked hungry. The animal was dirty, so Jake felt sorry for it and asked the owner if he could take it home. She agreed.

When Jake told his father about the dog, his dad shouted, “You can't keep it!” Jake took the dog outside and gave it some chicken from dinner. Later that night, Jake looked out the front window and saw the dog by the door. Since it was cold outside, Jake opened the door and

When you go out for dinner with your friends, you might have noticed that everyone in the restaurant is pulling out their phones and taking pictures of their food. Social media (社群網站) such as Facebook, Twitter and Instagram are full of food related pictures. Why do so many people enjoy sharing pictures of their meals on the Internet?

People like to record and share beautiful memories. When a beautiful dish is on the table, you might want to take a picture of it before you eat it. As humans, we like to remember the nice moments we had, and taking picture of the food is part of our nature. It is also a great way to share what you have been doing with friends and family who weren't there with you. Others keep track of what they eat to lose weight or stay healthy. There are thousands of healthy recipe pages on Instagram, which is not surprising at all.

Thousands of pictures are shared on the Internet every minute. According to a survey (調查) in 2013, 54% of 18-24 year-old users have taken a picture of their food before, and 39% of them have posted at least one food related picture online. It is quite clear that this trend is here to stay.

All animals need sleep, but how they sleep is another story. Indeed, some creatures get their shut-eye in very unusual ways.

Meerkats (狐獾), for instance, sleep in piles to stay warm and safe. Usually their leaders sleep in the middle of the pile, where they are safer from danger. Ducks also sleep together to stay safe. When it's time to hit the sack, ducks line up in a row (一排). The ducks at the two ends of the row sleep with one eye open, obviously looking out for danger, while the others in between rest peacefully.

Horses and elephants doze standing up so that they can quickly escape predators (掠食者). Flamingos (紅鶴) also sleep on their feet, likely because they lack a comfortable space for lying down. What about bats? These animals hang upside down as they sleep, since it's easier for them to fly away from that position. Sloths (樹懶), on the other hand, curl up between tree branches when they hit the sack. Doing this disguises them—making them look like part of the tree and protects them from predators.

If you're wondering which animal has the cutest way of sleeping, look at sea otters (海獺). They'll sometimes hold hands while they sleep to avoid floating apart. These animals just love to stick together (黏在一起)!

- ( ) 16. What is the main idea of the article?
- (A) Many animals have unusual ways of sleeping.
 (B) Getting enough sleep helps animals to find more food in the wild.
 (C) Animals often sleep together because they want to keep warm.
