七、閱讀測驗

Did you ever go on a date where you didn't know what the person looked like until you met him or her in person? They call that a blind date. Let me tell you about a recent blind date I had. However, I didn't know it was a blind date at the time.

One month ago, my friend Sally and I went to a hotpot restaurant. When we got there, we sat down at a table with two other people: Sally's boyfriend, Ron, and another guy named Jim. Jim was a nice guy and we became good friends. We even started dating. Last week, Sally told me a secret about that night. She took me to that restaurant to meet Jim. “Why didn't you tell me it was a blind date?” I asked. “You always worry too much about people's appearances—yours and other people's. You would never go on a blind date,” Sally said. She was right. And she taught me an important lesson. That is, I shouldn't focus so much on how people look.

- ( ) 48. What might be the best title for this article?
(A) A Blind-Date Experience (B) Experience of a Blind Person's Day
(C) A Beauty-and-Beast Story (D) Beauty Is Only Skin Deep
