1. Derek Redmond was born on September 3, 1965, in Bletchley, Buckinghamshire, to parents Jim and Jennie from West India. He attended Roade Comprehensive School in Northamptonshire, where there is now a sports hall in his name. In 1985, he broke the British record for the four-hundred-meter race with a time of just 44.82 seconds.

To achieve his goals, he trained hard and was determined to win no matter what. In 1986, Redmond was a member of the team that won gold in the 4×400m relay* at the European Championships and Commonwealth Games. In the following year, he was on the team that won the 4×400m relay silver medal at the World Championships.

However, after he tore his hamstring in the 1992 Barcelona Olympics, he was told by a doctor he could never represent his country in professional sports again. But he did not let this stop him. He went on to play basketball for the Birmingham Bullets years later. Redmond is a man of great strength who truly teaches us the power of never giving up.

2. The key to preparing to run a race starts with eating right. There are many parts to this. First, start spacing out your meals. Smaller meals that are spread out every two or three hours through the day can keep your energy levels up. Next, make sure the energy you are gaining comes from good sources of vitamins and protein*, such as broccoli*, sweet potatoes, chicken, or fish. Another key is to drink water, and nothing else. Drinking half of your body weight in ounces should be your daily goal. Water is especially important before and after workouts, when your body needs it the most. Try to avoid energy drinks or alcohol*, which contain too much sugar. Alcohol can actually remove water from the body, which is quite harmful for athletes. Most importantly, make sure to eat before the race day. It is a good idea to have something easy on the stomach the night before and a simple breakfast two or three hours before the race. You can try foods such as oatmeal or a bagel with peanut butter. Lastly, try to take notes on what works best for your body. Since everyone's body is special, your body may react to something differently than someone else. Have fun, and good luck on the race day!
