7. 起源於 (A) occupy (B) opportunity (C) highlight (D) originate										My best friend’s Indian wedding last year reminded me of the interesting cultural differences which exist in the world. Unlike the usual one-day weddings in the States, Indian weddings usually last at least three days. It was a large event with over 300 people, as Indians tend to invite all of their family members and friends.
8. 方面 (A) assistant (B) aspect (C) arrange (D) authentic										The main wedding activity took place in a large, grand room. Buffet stations were set up outside and servers stood behind each station. I got so hungry as I eyed the huge selection of food, which included oven-baked bread, various types of curry, spiced chicken, and vegetables. I also could not ignore the selection of desserts which included Indian ice cream and sweets made from nuts. Another Indian friend explained these types of food were mostly from North India. If it had been a South Indian wedding, the food would have been mainly vegetarian and included lots of different rice dishes. They would have been served on banana leaves with no utensils offered. Who knew there could be such cultural differences in food alone?
