We all experience changes in our lives. How successfully we deal with those changes depends on our emotional reactions to them. People may tell us to be happy and to bury away our sadness, but in reality, feeling sad can help us a lot in life. Pixar’s Inside Out does a great job at teaching us not to ignore feelings of sadness.

In the movie, a young girl named Riley moves to San Francisco when her father takes a new job there. As Riley struggles to fit in to her new environment, her emotions—Joy, Sadness, Fear, Anger, and Disgust—disagree on how best to do it. Riley’s mom tells her to be happy, but in the end, it’s Sadness, not Joy, that helps Riley the most in dealing with life changes. Through Sadness, Riley reconnects with those that are closest to her, and these connections are at the root of happiness. For example, when Riley’s made-up friend Bing Bong feels sad after having lost his wagon, it’s Sadness’s understanding that helps Bing Bong recover, not Joy’s attempt to cheer him up.

As Inside Out shows, sadness can be uncomfortable to deal with, but it’s an important emotion. In some ways, it’s the main emotion that helps us deal with changes and search for new happiness.

28. According to the passage, which of the following is NOT mentioned as an advantage of sadness?
