Part III. Reading Comprehension 32%@ 4%

In today's world, communication networks have revolutionized how we interact with each other. Social media platforms and online forums have become essential parts of our daily lives. However, with this freedom comes great responsibility.

When we write down our thoughts online, we must remember that our words can account for both positive and negative consequences. A noisy comment or harsh criticism might seem harmless at first, but it can seriously affect someone's feelings. We should always keep our head and think carefully before posting anything that might hurt others.

Good digital citizens understand that freedom of speech doesn't mean we can say anything without considering the impact. Just as we wouldn't be noisy in a library or classroom, we need to show respect in digital spaces. When disagreements arise, the best approach is often to leave controversial topics alone rather than fighting endlessly online.

Practicing good online etiquette means treating others with the same respect we would expect in face-to-face conversations. We should ask for clarification when we don't understand something and always make it clear that we respect different opinions.

Remember, our digital footprints can give off lasting impressions. By balancing our right to free expression with responsible behavior, we can create a more positive online community for everyone.

35. According to the passage, what is the main reason why we should be careful about our online comments?

- (A) Social media companies are monitoring all our online activities closely
- (B) Online platforms might delete our inappropriate posts permanently
- (C) Other users will immediately report us to the authorities
- (D) Our digital words can lead to both positive and negative outcomes

36. What can we infer about the author's attitude toward online disagreements?

- (A) Online debates are necessary for developing critical thinking skills
- (B) People should always defend their opinions regardless of others' feelings
- (C) Social media platforms should ban all forms of political discussions
- (D) It's better to avoid discussing controversial topics in digital spaces

37. Which of the following best describes the author's main argument about digital citizenship?

- (A) Government regulations are needed to control internet behavior effectively
- (B) We must balance our right to express ourselves with respectful conduct
- (C) Traditional face-to-face communication is superior to digital interaction methods
- (D) Complete freedom of speech should be the primary goal online

38. The phrase "digital footprints can give off lasting impressions" suggests that:

- (A) Technology companies use our data to create detailed psychological profiles
- (B) Digital devices leave physical traces that can be tracked by experts
- (C) Our online activities create permanent records that influence how others see us
- (D) Social media posts automatically disappear after a certain period of time

The pandemic has brought about significant changes in how we work, learn, and live. Many companies set off on a journey to transform their business models, allowing employees to work out their daily tasks from home. This shift has accounted for a dramatic rise in the home economy.

Remote work has become increasingly popular. Employees no longer need to set out early in the morning to commute to their offices. Instead, they can take on their responsibilities from the comfort of their homes. Many workers have discovered they can get by effectively without traditional office environments, and some companies have decided to let up on strict office attendance requirements.

Online learning has also built up momentum during this period. Students can now read over course materials and attend virtual classes without leaving their homes. Educational institutions have brought out new digital platforms to support distance learning.

The delivery service industry has thrown up remarkable growth opportunities. People can now ask for food, groceries, and other essentials to be delivered directly to their doorsteps. This convenience has helped many businesses clear up financial difficulties during challenging times.

As a whole, the home economy represents a fundamental shift in lifestyle patterns. Generally speaking, people have learned to adapt to this new way of living, and many stand a chance of continuing these practices even after the pandemic ends.

39. What was the primary factor that led to the development of the home economy mentioned in the passage?

- (A) Government policies encouraging people to stay at home
- (B) The pandemic that forced changes in work and lifestyle patterns
- (C) Companies wanting to reduce their operational costs significantly
- (D) Technological advances that made remote work more efficient

40. According to the passage, how has remote work benefited employees?

- (A) They can earn higher salaries while working from home
- (B) They have more opportunities for career advancement
- (C) They no longer need to travel to offices early each morning
- (D) They can choose their own working hours completely

41. What can we infer about the future of the home economy based on the passage?

- (A) It will completely replace traditional office work permanently
- (B) It may continue to be popular even after the pandemic
- (C) It will only survive if governments provide financial support
- (D) It depends entirely on further technological improvements

42. The phrase "thrown up remarkable growth opportunities" in the context means:

- (A) Created unexpected chances for business expansion
- (B) Rejected traditional methods of service delivery
- (C) Eliminated competition between different companies
- (D) Caused problems for established business models
