III. Cloze (每題 2 分/20 分)

The job of an astronaut is one of the most dangerous jobs imaginable, particularly when long missions are involved. Scientists at NASA estimate that a mission to Mars would last _____ two years.

The chances of astronauts experiencing psychological difficulties increase as they spend more time _____. Such difficulties could negatively influence the _____ of the crew. _____ such problems, NASA has a strict selection process for astronauts. This is to _____ that no astronauts who have any fear or anxiety over a mission will be selected for it. Astronauts know that they will lead a stressful life in space. Therefore, selection must be _____ those with great confidence in their ability to handle pressure. _____, confidence alone is not enough. Therefore, NASA has a list of nine skills that play a key role in its selection process, including leadership, teamwork, and group-living skills. Because of this thorough selection process, and _____ having thousands of applicants for a mission, NASA will usually consider at most only about sixty applicants to be suitable for space travel.

_____ that a mission to Mars would be a hugely demanding job for an astronaut. Thus, NASA will take _____ time as it requires to ensure that astronauts can be sent to the Red Planet as safely as possible. Hopefully, such a mission can be launched within the next decade.
