Politeness seems to be disappearing from our world. In the past, people said “please” and “thank you” often. Here is a story to make us think about kindness-Small acts of politeness can change people's lives. Once upon a time, there was a poor couple. Although they did not have much money, they were very kind. One day, a stranger came to town. He lost his wallet and needed a place to stay. Everyone told the man to go away, except for the poor couple. They were polite and invited the stranger to stay with them for free. Several days later the stranger returned home, and then he went to the town to visit the couple again. He thanked them for being so polite and kind to a stranger. Before he left, the stranger dropped a bag of gold coins on their kitchen table. Inside was a note read “Kindness always pays!”										6. What is the main purpose of this passage?

Pop-up restaurants are a really big deal these days. Nevertheless, the idea of setting up a temporary restaurant is not new to people in Taiwan. For decades, people have enjoyed delicious meals of bandos. In English, the word “bando” translates to “set up tables.” In most cases, bandos are set up on the side of a road or other public spaces. They usually happen during special events like traditional holidays or weddings. First, a large tent is set up and a lot of tables and chairs are brought inside. In Taiwan, red color has the meaning of good luck. You may see red is most chosen for bando banquets. About 10 to 12 dishes are prepared for the guests to eat. For suggesting a positive future, dishes are usually in even numbers. You can also see takeaway bags for guests to bring the leftovers home. During the meal, music is played and entertainers will sing for the guests. Lots of bandos have a special host that will wish everybody good luck										8.
