Shanna Niehaus' five-year-old son Kai had autism. Children with autism struggle with relationships. Shanna worried that Kai would not make friends or ever hug her. She took him to many doctors, but none could help.

Then, she learned about service dogs trained to help people with autism. One day, a service dog called Tornado arrived. Everything changed. Kai immediately wanted to be close to it. When Tornado lay down, Kai did the same with his head on the dog's furry body. From that day Kai has become happier. In fact, he even allows his mother to hug him now.

Many children with autism cannot be aware of danger. Jennifer Mandell kept her boy Sam at home from the age of two. Sam did not know that he needed his mother to keep him safe and ran away from her. He even ran into moving cars.

Like Shanna, Jennifer decided to get a service dog. She registered a dog named Hagar, specially trained for autism. Sam felt comfortable with the dog, so Jennifer took them out. Sam held on to the dog and did not run away. Thanks to Hagar, Jennifer can now safely take Sam out. These two service dogs are the boys' best buddies. They have certainly made a great difference to their family life.
