- (A) Meanwhile, another crew member replaces the empty food carts with restocked ones.
- (B) It's a system that has been set up to keep to flight schedules so that flights aren't delayed.
- (C) Finally, once the specialist at air traffic control gives the green light, the flight takes off.
- (D) Next, they meet up inside the cabin to review a flight plan document and weather reports.
- (E) The airline's customer service team reviews passenger requests for special meals or seat changes.

Ever wondered what happens behind the scenes during pre-flight preparation? While passengers sit comfortably at the flight gate, a process has already kicked off* to get the planes ready for takeoff. __21__ Let's take a look at the system. After each plane reaches its gate, it has around 80 minutes before it needs to leave again. The ramp team, or those who handle the baggage, will immediately jump into action. One person unloads all the luggage onto a moving belt that passes it down to another bag handler. This handler on the ground floor then puts the luggage in a cart to be transported to the baggage pickup area. __22__

As for the plane itself, an aircraft repairman goes through a checklist to make sure everything is in good condition. He or she inspects the pilot's area, all the systems, and the outside of the airplane. At the same time, the flight crew checks the pressure, the condition of the brakes, and the lights. __23__ The captain updates everyone on the estimated flight time and any expected instability due to weather conditions, such as outside hot air or clouds. Just before takeoff, a big truck with a fuel tank stops next to the plane and connects to its wing to pump away. __24__

As we see, this system of pre-flight preparation involves several groups of people. Many actions must be taken at the same time by the different groups to ensure a timely takeoff. So the next time you're impatient to board, just think about all the busy jobs that must be done first!

Part III. Reading Comprehension 10%

Throughout history, times of war have caused immense suffering for countless people. Yet, during these dark periods, women have consistently stepped forward to play critical humanitarian roles, offering hope and protection amid chaos.

In many conflicts, hospitals and medical facilities are destroyed or overwhelmed. In response, thousands of women have served as nurses and caregivers, often working near battle zones with limited supplies. During World War II, for example, female nurses risked their lives to treat wounded soldiers and civilians, saving many despite dangerous and harsh conditions. Some women demonstrated extraordinary bravery by shielding others from harm. One notable example is Antonina Żabinska, the wife of the Warsaw Zoo director, who hid Jewish families in empty animal enclosures during the Nazi occupation. She would discreetly play the piano to warn those in hiding when Nazi officers were nearby. Thanks to her courage, approximately 300 lives were saved.

War often tears apart communities, but women frequently become the glue that holds society together. They organize food distribution, care for orphaned children, and create safe spaces for education. In some war zones, women have even run secret schools to ensure that children could continue learning despite the danger. In addition to their humanitarian efforts, women have also played key roles in peace movements. During Liberia's civil war, women organized nonviolent protests and pressured leaders to negotiate peace. Their persistence demonstrated that grassroots action could help bring about meaningful change.

Today, women continue to act courageously in conflict zones around the world, embodying compassion and resilience. Their stories remind us that even during the darkest times, individuals can choose to protect human dignity and work toward a better future.

Part IV. Mixed Questions 8%

My name is Rahul, and I am a dabbawala in Mumbai. Every day, I deliver home-cooked meals to office workers in the city. My job starts early in the morning when I collect lunch boxes, or “dabbas,” from people’s homes. I use a bicycle to move around the busy streets of Mumbai.

The work is not easy. I have to be very careful with the dabbas and make sure they reach the right people on time. The traffic in Mumbai can be terrible, and sometimes it rains heavily. But I never give up. I know that many workers are waiting for their lunch.

We have a special system to keep track of all the dabbas. We use different colors and symbols to organize our deliveries. This system helps us work quickly and avoid mistakes.

One of the best things about my job is that I help people eat healthy, home-cooked food. It makes me happy to see their smiles when I deliver their dabbas. We dabbawalas are known for being very reliable. We almost never make mistakes, even though we deliver thousands of lunch boxes every day.

I am proud of my work. It’s not just a job; it’s a service to the community. At the end of the day, when I return the empty dabbas to my customers’ homes, I feel a sense of achievement. I know I’ve played a small but important part in keeping Mumbai running. Being a dabbawala is more than delivering food; it’s about connecting people and preserving an important part of our city’s culture.

請從文章中選出兩個單詞 (word)，分別填入下列空格，並視語法需要作適當的字形變化，使句子語意完整、語法正確，且符合原文文意。每格限填一個單詞 (word)。

The dabbawalas take pride in 30._____ thousands of lunch boxes daily through Mumbai’s busy streets. This unique system helps in the 31._____ of an important part of Mumbai’s culture, allowing office workers to enjoy home-cooked meals despite their busy urban lifestyles.

32. From (A) to (F) below, choose the ONES that are true for the dabbawalas.

- (A) Dabbawalas in Mumbai start their workday in the evening.
- (B) The dabbawala system uses different colors and symbols to organize deliveries.
- (C) Rahul collects lunch boxes from restaurants in the afternoon.
- (D) Dabbawalas rarely make mistakes despite delivering thousands of lunch boxes daily.
- (E) The main challenge for dabbawalas is the lack of customers in Mumbai.
- (F) Dabbawalas return empty lunch boxes to offices at the end of the day.

33. Which adjective in the passage means “that can be trusted to do something well or that you can rely on”?
