選出最適合填入空格的四個句子：

- (A) This area contains 80 murals by local and international artists completed in 2020.
 (B) Since the city owns the structure, some argue they have the right to manage it as they see fit.
 (C) The Artists' Walk has become one of New York's popular tourist spots, attracting visitors from around the globe.
 (D) When artists declined, the administration suggested hiring new artists to recreate similar works, leaving original creators uncompensated.
 (E) In fact, the city administration had already altered several murals in 2022 during a renovation project.

In New York City, the historic High Line railway has been transformed into an elevated park, featuring public art installations. One notable section called the Artists' Walk showcases outdoor murals. 31 These contemporary artworks represent urban diversity and community spirit.

Recently, in 2023, 15 artists who created murals for the Artists' Walk sued the city administration for modifying their artwork. 32 The city officials then proposed compensation of $2000 to each artist to create new pieces. 33

The situation raises complex legal and ethical questions. 34 However, one could also argue that artists retain rights to their work, even in public spaces, and no entity should alter it without permission.

Ken and Marie are working on a project for a business course. For this project, they must research food delivery apps and create a competitive app of their own. In the conversation below, they are discussing their research results.

Marie: Let's talk about Chart 1 first; how long do you expect it should take for people's food to be sent to them? The results show that almost 70% of people hoped that their food would be delivered within 20 or 30 minutes. By contrast, only a few people said they hoped their food would be delivered within 10 minutes. These results are not in line with my initial expectations; I thought that most people would hope to enjoy their food as soon as possible.

Ken: Interesting. Maybe we should conduct follow-up interviews to find out these people's reasons for their responses so that we can develop more effective marketing strategies. Also, I noticed that only about 5% of people said that they were willing to wait 50 minutes or more for their orders.

Marie: Exactly. So we should make sure that our app doesn't allow orders to be made from beyond a certain distance from the restaurant to be placed.

Ken: Hey, take a look at Charts 2 and 3. We've checked Mealy and FoodyQ, the two leading existing apps. Most of the restaurants on those apps offer drinks and Taiwanese dishes in our neighborhood. Besides those, it is shown that these two kinds of food are also high on the customer's demand list, although they are not commonly found on the existing platforms.

Marie: That's good information and could be a good start to making our app the best choice.
