It is not uncommon for athletes to get hurt. Getting 21 is one of the risks of pushing one's body to the limit on a regular basis. In fact, numerous Olympic athletes have lost their chance to win a gold 22 by getting hurt. 23, at the 2008 Olympics in Beijing, everyone in China had high hopes for Chinese athlete Liu Xiang. 24, Liu Xiang quit before the final round because he could barely walk. The response from his fans was quite 25. Many of the people of his country were crying, and some were even angry at him.

Weightlifting 26 Jaehyouk Sa from South Korea is another example. At the 2012 Olympics in London, Jaehyouk Sa set a new weightlifting record. But he then dropped the weights 27 pain when he seriously harmed his elbow. 28 moments, he was taken to the hospital. Another weightlifter then 29 in beating his record.

As you can see, it takes not only strength but also great 30 to become an athlete. The chance of getting hurt is very real, but these heroes still try their hardest despite the risk.

四、閱讀測驗(1 小題，每格 2 分，共 8 分)

There are many sports featured in the Olympic Games. Sports such as swimming, basketball, and tennis are all popular events watched by many. Few Olympic sports, however, go as far back in history as the marathon*.

Marathons have been around since 490 BC, when the Greeks beat the Persians near a city called Marathon, which was located about 26 miles from Athens. Upon their victory, the Greeks ordered a messenger named Pheidippides to run to Athens to make the announcement. When Pheidippides got to Athens, he cried aloud, "Nike!" or "Victory!" in Greek. Then, as a result of heat and extreme tiredness, he collapsed to the ground and died.

When the first modern Games were being planned in 1896, the organizers wanted to dedicate a sport in honor of this interesting piece of history. Therefore, they suggested a long-distance race from Marathon to Athens to mark Pheidippides's brave run. Greek runner Spyridon Louis won that race, and its place in future Games was assured*.

The first marathon was 39.9 kilometers. However, the distance was later changed to 42.195 kilometers to reflect the distance from Windsor Castle to the Olympic stadium for the 1908 London Olympics. Although there are many sporting events in the Olympics, marathons remain one of the most historical and important features of the Olympic Games.

五、混合題(素養題)(1 小題，每格 2 分，共 10 分)

Dear Susan,

I was so honored to come to your graduation ceremony*. How long has it been since we last met?

As your aunt, I care a great deal about you. I noticed something on this trip. You seemed to have lost a lot of weight, didn't you? How many pounds have you lost?

As a doctor, I am worried that you have become so thin. Young people may want to stay slim, but being too thin can lead to lots of health problems.

I wonder, is your diet balanced? Do you eat enough vegetables and meat? Here is my advice to you. First, you can use a chart to track your weight. Try to weigh yourself on a daily basis for at least two months. It would be even better for you to go to a dietitian* who can help you calculate* your ideal body weight.

Of course, there are reasons why one might lose weight. Are you eating less? Loss of appetite is a serious problem, which may lead to fatigue* and a lack of energy. If that happens, you won't be able to work well. Go see a doctor if you need to. Your health is more important than your degree.

Yours truly,

Aunt Dora
